

Donnerstag: 18.06.20 16:00 s.t.

Zentrum für Bioinformatik, Bundesstraße 43, Raum 16

Everything already said about Secondary Structure Elements!?

Secondary structure elements have plenty of applications in the field of chemical biology. Although the scientific debate about their classification was initiated by Pauling almost 70 years ago, their proper classification is still a challenging issue. Unfortunately, this fact and the subjective nature of their classification are often concealed by their automated assignment or availability per default. So, has everything really already been said?

Tobias Brinkjost
Chemical Biology
TU Dortmund

Everyone is welcome!