Conference Announcement

The Role of Knowledge for Responsible Decision Making in Organizations

31 May-1 June 2023
Gästehaus der Universität Hamburg, Rothenbaumchaussee 34, 20148 Hamburg

Various disciplines investigate the qualities that organizations and their members need to generate, share, and store information for responsible decision-making, yet often in isolation from each other. We aim to bridge these disciplinary boundaries by bringing together fifteen scholars working across philosophy, organizational studies, psychology, sociology, and law.

Topics that the conference presentations explore include:

- Foundational topics such as whether responsibility for actions based on group beliefs transmits to the members of the organization or whether willful ignorance leads to equal culpability;
- Psychological issues such as what we can learn from research on conspiracy theories about organizational decision making or whether organizations can generate trust from mistrust; and
- Applied issues such as platform surveillance, corporate bullshit, and the impact of workplace democracy on corporate decision making.
